

Construction Litigation

Our team of attorneys at McMillan Metro Faerber has a unique depth of knowledge when representing clients in construction litigation with experience in cases involving building construction disputes, home improvement disputes, breach of contract, contract termination (for cause and convenience), construction insurance and bonds, mechanic's liens, design and defects, delay claims, and specific issues related to the Covid-19 pandemic.

We serve individuals, contractors, commercial developers, and property owners in front of state courts and regulatory bodies, as well as in negotiations, arbitration, alternative dispute resolution, mediation, and hearings. Our litigators have experience trying cases on behalf of plaintiffs or defendants throughout the DMV in jury and bench trials and in arbitration. Additionally, our litigation department is skilled in representation before state agencies including the Department of Professional and Occupational Regulation (DPOR), Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs (DCRA), and Maryland Home Improvement Commission (MHIC).

At McMillan Metro Faerber, a client first approach is employed. Our attorneys demonstrate a commitment to protecting the client's interests and pursuing the client's objectives, tailoring our services to meet the needs of each specific client and case. The construction litigation team has in-depth knowledge and a comprehensive understanding of the construction industry, including its operations, intricacies, and challenges. Our attorneys develop close relationships with their clients, fostering a deep level of trust and in-depth understanding of the issues.
