

Regulatory Compliance

At McMillan Metro Faerber our health care attorneys understand there is more to health care regulatory compliance than not sharing patient information and not paying others for referrals. Our health care attorneys understand the nuances of the strict rules that health care providers and health care businesses need to comply with in order to run a lawful health care business ... and to avoid severe civil, criminal, and licensure consequences. Our health care attorneys work to stay informed of existing regulatory issues and abreast of health policy being shaped every day in Washington, D.C. and in the jurisdictions where we work. We appreciate the importance of the provider-patient relationship and work with our health care clients to value and preserve the sanctity of that relationship. Here are some of the Regulatory Compliance areas where McMillan Metro Faerber provides experienced legal advice and representation for our clients:

- Evaluation of Business Relationships for Fraud and Abuse Considerations
- Business Associate Agreements
- HIPAA Policies
- Representation in Internal and Facility Disciplinary Matters
- Evaluation of Professional Board Discipline Claims and Charges
